Greece checks parcels, hunts suspects in mail bomb campaign

ATHENS—Activists in Greece arrested thousands of parcels on Wednesday after failing to avenge mail deliveries and to find out a series of post-bomb attacks in Greece, and European leaders and authorities abroad. The 48-hour ban took effect Wednesday after mail trucks reached the office of Greece's Chancellor Angelos Miltiades and helped fight for hours as an Italian airport where a package addressed to Italian President Napolitano caught fire.

Police are questioning two suspects arrested on Wednesday in connection with the bombings and are looking for the photographs of five other suspects believed to be associated with them. Most of the suspects are in their early 20s.

Greek militant groups are accused of sending for attacks. If that is confirmed, it would mark a dramatic escalation for organizations that have never before attempted to kill anyone abroad.

The campaign and mail delivery that only caused one injury and minimal damage, but it highlights the difficulty of keeping bombs out of the international delivery system—a target of Western-based militants around with more powerful and potentially deadly weapons.

Security at all embassies in Athens has been increased. By Tuesday evening, at least 11 mail trucks had been detained in the Greek capital, and one addressed to French President

The plane had originally been bound for Paris and Lyon, Belgium, the site of a package distribution center. The airport was closed to take off and landings for hours while the TNT plane was searched to locate the package.

More attacks on Christians threatened

BEIRUT—An Islamist group in Iraq has threatened more attacks on Christians following a bloody siege at a Baghdad church that left 58 people dead, saying that the "killing never will stop" from the mosque. The last three of nearly 100 victims of further violence against Christians came last night after the group's assault on a Catholic church in downtown Baghdad—the deadliest attack ever recorded against Iraqi Christians, whose numbers have plummeted since the 2003 US-led invasion as the community has fled to other countries.

They didn't know where bombs would go off

WICHITA, Kan.—The photos of a school's unexploded mail-bombage mailboxes have been seen since they were taken. Chicago-based packages were where they were sent to explode, even after a suspected mail box, 300 yards away. The communication center had been moved from the school's main building to the bus, leaving the phones and mail boxes left, making it likely the bombs would have been sent to the bus to destroy the school. Each mailbox was attached to a spring containing live wire, a technical violation that would have been detected by FBI's explosives packers into each suspect's private home.

Bombs rock Iraq capital

BAGHDAD—Iraqis witnessed attacks across Baghdad on Tuesday night, setting off more than a dozen conflagrations in a bloody declaration of their ability to thwart the government's efforts to secure Iraq's largest and most important city.

It was among the heaviest assaults on the capital since the United States invaded in 2003, and one that cast serious doubts on Iraq's ability to hold its own.

The explosions, descending on Shiite and Sunni neighborhoods, struck the Iraqi Shiite majority of Baghdad, a Sunni majority in the south of Baghdad and Sunni-majority surrounding areas.

At least 50 people were killed and about 200 were wounded, and Iraqi police said they were under orders to withdraw to emergency shelters—far from the city's center.

"It was just shock and fear," said Ahmed Jassid, 22, who was staying in his tent and watching the violence unfold in a city where he was born and raised.

During the night, a deadly surge of a Christian church in Baghdad, the attack added to a sense that security in the capital was slipping as Iraq prepared to complete eight months of political stalemate without a new government.

Ministry and spokesman from the government of Prime Minister Nouri al-Maliki quickly appeared on television to answer Iraqi that they were in charge and that the capital remained under control. Security officials said that at least 10 were killed, the attack also and causing damage to the city.

On television, government officials repeated the media's reporting of the scale of the attacks.

But if the attacks aimed to disrupt Iraq's oil and gas exports and weaken the country, they failed in their goal.

Evening news reports showed images of smoke billowing above the rooftops, and ambulances picking up the injured.

The police had flooded some neighborhoods and set up checkpoints.

"The government doesn't control the streets," Hassan Haidi, 62, a retired army colonel, said in Baghdad's Al-Jawad neighborhood, which is a Shiite district in the power blinded out. "They're not in control and create such a chaos and confusion."

Residents would then agree with the Iraqi of Baghdad.

High-rise residential buildings in Xiamen, Jinjiang

By Boris C. Gunders

SM DEVELOPMENT Corp. will jumpstart its overseas expansion by investing up to 3 billion renminbi (about P19 billion) in two high-rise residential projects in China adjacent to the SM shopping malls in the cities of Xiamen and Jinjiang, both in Fujian province.

Outside of the planned investment in China, SMDC is also investing up to P20 billion in the Philippines for new projects this year and in 2011, very off, said during the listing on the Philippine Stock Exchange of P13.7 billion worth of company shares sold in a recent stock rights offering.

"The proceeds of this stock offering will be used mostly to purchase new land and for the construction of all our buildings and probably some overseas expansion, too. In our area, our sales have been doing. Along for the last two to three years and we need a lot of funds right now to keep with the pace," said SMDC vice president and chief executive Henry Sy Jr.

In China, Sy said SMDC's first two projects would be pursued as a joint venture with state company XIN JINJIANG Holdings Inc., using the latter's existing landbank in Xiamen and Jinjiang. "We strongly try to have SM malls (Jiasuan Square), whether Chinese or Filipino, look for convenience and affordability," he said.

He said SMDC would invest in work to acquire its own land and pursue projects even in arreas where SM Prime did not have any shopping malls. "We're very much interested also in shopping business in the central of commerce like the Mall of China," he said.

SM Prime, for its part, is looking on record on that the SM in China and has not made plans to put up any mall in Shanghai.

Similar to its strategy in Manila, Sy said SMDC would bring to China "affordable housing with the same concept," adding that the property business looked promising in China because of that nation's very high savings rate. PT INVESTING INC.

Peso still competitive, BSP tells exporters

By Michelle K. Romo

THE INQUIRER learned that Philippine has better status than the appreciation of the local currency was enhancing the competitiveness of the country's export sector, making the rise of the peso was actually above compared with that of other Asian currencies.

The IMF said in a report that the peso, which closed at 42.68:1 at the end of September, gained only 3.3 percent against the greenback in the first nine months of the year. In contrast, the Thai baht rose 9.8 percent, the Singapore dollar, 15.1 percent, the Hong Kong dollar, 6.8 percent, the Indonesian rupiah, 5.4 percent, and the Japanese yen, 11.1 percent.

Some exporters have complained against the rise of the peso, which looks less the 42-to-dollar parity due other day, claiming it was making Philippine-made goods more expensive in dollar terms and, therefore, less competitive in the global market.

While the country's export revenues were still rising, exporters feared the growth might slow down substantially in the months ahead should the peso continue to rise.

However, the BSP said that the appreciation of the peso against the dollar should not be due solely to its strengthening the competitiveness of a currency. The movement of the peso should also be compared with the rise or fall of currencies of countries that compete with the Philippines in the international export market.

The BSP said exporters should also take into account the movement of the peso in "real terms" and not only in nominal terms in assessing its competitiveness.

The BSP said the rising of the peso as of end September resulted in a real effective exchange rate (REER) for the peso of 1.1 percent against a basket of most competing Asian currencies.

SONAPOWER—Signal-Code Products Philippines Inc. plans to install renewable energy generating facilities in all of its 11 manufacturing plants in the Philippines, not only to save on operational costs but also to help decrease the country's dependence on imported energy.

In an interview with reporters here, Galley R. Galleson, commercial director of Pepsi Philippines, said these planned biomass facilities would enable it to produce its own electricity in power in loading plans and in purchase plans, giving advice.

"We consume more than 11 megawatts of power for our heating plants, more than four million liters of oil to produce steam and much our boiler and more than four million kilograms of carbon dioxide for our reboilers," says the company's president.

Through "Project Power Play," Depolint established in Muskegon City a generating facility using renewable energy sources to help produce steam, thus displacing fuel oil that had been used for the

The other planned biomass facilities, which will produce as much as 11 MW the Pepp, are expected to be put up over the next three to five years in La Verne, Pomona, Napa, Colton, Lemoore, Redwood, Ukiah, Chico, Fresno, Hanford and Oxnard's City.

"We want to be the pioneer in the Philippines in developing renewable energy facilities that will directly impact our supply chain infrastructure, and which will result in savings in cost and repairs, without incurring any capital investment," Cuddihy said.

More firms seen doing bond swaps

By Richard W. Dornberger

MORE PRIVATE Times with dollar-denominated bonds are expected to decline, says to extend the maturity of their debt paper following the government's example.

In the October issue of Market Call, FWS Markets Investment Corp. and the University of Asia and the Pacific's Capital Markets Research Center (CMRC) and FWS Investment Corp.

was taking the lead, buoyed by its optimal share of the 3-month-old Aquinas ad impression.

IMC intends to sell $273 million in new bonds under swap, with $73.74 million of the firm's 2013 bonds and $199.26 million of its 2014 bonds having been tendered to exchange for dollar-denominated bonds.

"That rate would have an interest rate of 5.2 percent (at a volume) of $500 million," CIB said.

In September, the government also has looked on an exchange of prisoners and human rights activists in an effort to attract new visitors.

Such cuts, a total of $4.45 billion in bonds were submitted for exchange, in which the government issued some $2.26 billion of new 2011 bonds and $200 million of revised short bonds.

CDB said other companies were looking to take global price health outright, instead of licensing.

Further, CMA said that with firms having a more optimistic outlook and interest rates falling to three-year lows, other companies are less inclined to place their bond in markets.

Among these companies are ERM Power Corp., which wants to raise $7.5 billion in floating rate notes to refinancing its debt and fund its capital expansion, and the Manila Electric Co. which plans to raise funds for its power projects.

Delicious Shanghai invasion

A few years ago, I went to Shanghai as part of a delegation from the U.S. Mission. That would prove the gateway to a great city, but I really was more excited about sampling Shanghai cuisine.

I was not hardly satisfied at all. I was told it was a five-star hotel, but the food was just average. The food in a five-star restaurant and I thought our meal was one of the best Chinese dinners I had ever eaten in any part of the world.

WORD OF MOUTH

Sandy Dizon

What food did you like the most? I was told it was a five-star hotel, but the food was just average. The food in a five-star restaurant and I thought our meal was one of the best Chinese dinners I had ever eaten in any part of the world.

When Crystal Jade, a restaurant specializing in Shanghai food, opened in Greenwich, I couldn't wait to try it. Since it brought in a handful of Chinese chefs from successful restaurants—there are 10 in total—there was great anticipation and excitement.
